We Are Open

Last week was our first week of regular hours. Many folks are happy to have more access to our services. We have even seen a few families and kids after school. With masks and social distancing, cleaning surfaces and limiting stays to 30 minutes, we have a good balance of safety and use of our space. This week we are counting visits (walk ins), reference questions and curbside service so we should have a better sense of use after gathering some data.

Baron Lot

City planner Megan McBride has submitted the CDBG application to the state which is anticipated to turn around by late March. So far, I have not heard anything regarding a potential developer's interest in the site. I will keep you posted, if anything changes.

Mini-Renovation

In record time (2 weeks) Dan Homola and crew have completed our service desk / workroom redo. Sheva posted some pictures on our FB account. It is very open and clean. The new work area keeps processes streamlined. The footprint of the former desk area is just open. We are thinking about dance parties and Zumba classes (remember Zumba) so are currently refraining from filling the space with furniture. In our socially distant times, it is nice to have some extra elbow room.

Staff

All are working to keep Lisa's workflow from piling up on her desk. She is still out, recovering from a broken knee. I do not have an anticipated return to work date, but she reports improvement every day. Justin is also still out and recovering from a broken ankle. The reduced city maintenance crew is juggling three buildings, but so far, the library continues to be clean. The area's lack of snow helps.

On the Horizon

The Book Trike is here! So we are excited to begin planning summer events outside at parks! The PBS grant and the potential STEM kits grant will give us some great programming activities. The Cruisin' the Corridor race committee met to plan the 2021 race. It will be virtual and hopefully in person. More details as planning develops.

Sarah A.
